Understanding the Export Landscape in Nigeria

Exporting agricultural products from Nigeria is one of the most promising ventures today, especially for entrepreneurs looking to earn in foreign currencies while contributing to the nation's non oil revenue base. With the right guidance, tools, and access to global markets, anyone from beginners to established traders can succeed in this growing industry.

The Role of NEPC in Nigeria's Export Ecosystem

The Nigerian Export Promotion Council (NEPC) is the primary government agency responsible for promoting and facilitating non oil exports from Nigeria. NEPC provides exporters with critical support services, including:

- Product development and packaging guidance
- Access to export training and capacity building programs
- Trade fair participation and matchmaking with foreign buyers
- Information on export incentives, such as the Export Expansion Grant (EEG)

For anyone serious about starting an export business in Nigeria, registering with NEPC is one of the first steps. Visit the official NEPC website at www.nepc.gov.ng to register your company, learn about available trainings, and access export documentation templates.

GACC and Exporting to China: What You Need to Know

If you're interested in exporting agricultural commodities to China, you must understand and comply with GACC requirements.

GACC stands for the General Administration of Customs of the People's Republic of China. It regulates the registration and approval of foreign suppliers who want to ship agricultural and food products to China. Since 2022, China has made it mandatory for foreign food exporters to register through its GACC portal to ensure traceability and compliance with safety standards.

To get started:

1. Visit the official China GACC website:

www.singlewindow.cn

2. Register your company as a foreign exporter or work with a registered Chinese importer

3. Ensure your facility and goods meet the sanitary and phytosanitary requirements of China

4. Provide traceable labeling and documentation for each shipment

Many exporters now partner with licensed freight forwarders or export consultants who can assist with GACC compliance and help smoothen the registration process.
